

Barcelona:

A seaport on the Mediterranean and host of the 1992 Olympic Games, Barcelona is the capital of the autonomous region of Catalonia in Northeastern Spain. The city masterfully combines the vestiges of its Roman past—in particular its old city quarters—and beautiful examples of Modernism and the Vanguard Movement of the 20th century. UNESCO has declared the works of Catalan architects Antoni Gaudí and Lluís Domènech i Montaner World Heritage Sites.

Granada

Granada:

Located in southern Spain at the foot of the mighty Sierra Nevada Mountains, Granada is one of the most fascinating Spanish cities, boasting a rich Moorish heritage and splendid Renaissance and Baroque architectural masterpieces. Important vestiges of Granada's Moorish past include the Albaicin quarter, the Alhambra and the Generalife—all World Heritage Sites. The Royal Chapel is the final resting place of King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella. The Alhambra, the palace of Granada's Moorish kings, is perhaps unrivalled in Spain for its beauty and architectural splendor, receiving more visitors each year than any other Spanish monument. Granada's streets, fountains, and gardens bear witness to a fabulous mix of cultures, making a visit to Granada a most memorable experience.
